Series Continuities

All of my books can be read as standalones, even those in series. But if you're someone who likes to read books in order, some of my series are also interconnected with each other. The continuities are listed below numbered with the correct order for reading.

Green Valley Continuity

1. Convenient Marriages, Books 3-5 (starting with A Wedded Arrangement)
2. The Magnussons (starting with Breakaway)
3. Green Valley series (starting with A Holiday Set-Up)

Tea for Two Continuity

1. Tea for Two series (starting with Falling for her Brother's Best Friend)
2. The Loft series (starting with Living with her One-Night Stand)

Damon Continuity

1. Heirs of Damon series (starting with Seducing the Enemy)
2. Beaufort Brides series (starting with Hired Bride)
3. Eden Manor series (starting with One Week with her Rival)
4. Christmas at Eden Manor concludes the entire continuity (no more books planned!)

Willow Park Continuity

1. Willow Park series (starting with Married for Christmas)
2. Balm in Gilead series (starting with Relinquish)

One Night Novellas

The first three One Night novellas are entirely standalone, but the second set of them are interconnected. The second set should be read in this order:

1. One Night with her Boss
2. One Night with her Roommate
3. One Night with the Best Man

Recurring Characters

- The Girlfriend (in the Companions for Hire series) features both a hero and a heroine who are introduced in Purchased Husband (the final book in the Trophy Husbands series)
- The Convenient Marriages series is a very loose series connected primarily by tone and the marriage-of-convenience trope. But books 3-5 have recurring characters.
- A secondary character in A Negotiated Marriage is the hero in Revival.
- Married by Contract was written as a kind of companion to A Negotiated Marriage, using the same trope but in reverse and including repeated motifs as grace notes.
- A secondary character in Married by Contract is the hero in A Princess Next Door.
- A secondary character in The Loft series is the hero of In Want of a Wife
